Corruption Breeds Discontent

The corruption at the top is now getting so blatant it seems to be infecting everything.

From Eliyahu

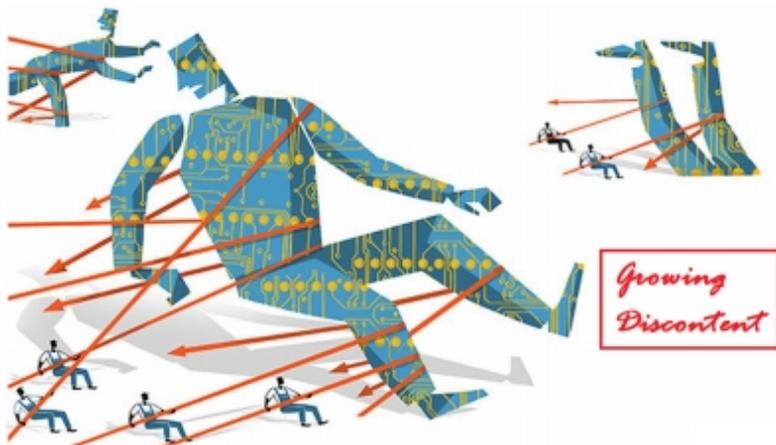

Hello Friends,

Even veterans of the normal corruption in Washington were surprised, and even a bit shocked, by the tale. The head of the Department of Justice, Loretta Lynch, landed on the tarmac of the airport in Phoenix, were it turns out the private jet of Bill Clinton was already parked. This looked like an unscheduled meeting to the FBI and Secret Service agents tasked with security, according to reports. They say they knew nothing about it in advance.

Yet, Bill Clinton was there, and soon he mounted the steps and boarded Lynch's plane. Reportedly they spent about a half an hour making small talk about grand children and Clinton's golf game, Lynch holding up her scheduled activities to chat with Bill Clinton. As Clinton prepared to deplane, FBI agents passed the word to everyone in the area that no video cameras or cell phone pictures would be allowed. Soon Clinton departed and Lynch's motorcade carried her off to her pre-arranged scheduled activities.

The problem here of course is that Hillary Clinton is currently under criminal investigation by the FBI. The conflict of interest for Loretta Lynch in this meeting is therefore obvious. Calls have been made for her to recuse herself from the case and even to step down from her position, but so far she has given no indication that she plans on giving up control over the outcome of the case.

All of this became even more suspect a few days later when FBI agents questioned Hillary Clinton for 3 1/2 hours. Had Loretta Lynch met with Bill Clinton to prepare Hillary in advance for the questions that would be asked? Did something even more nefarious happen involving a conspiracy to obstruct justice at the highest level of the Democratic party? Whatever had happened, it comes under the general category of corruption and abuse of public office. It could hardly be more blatant.

This is just one more example of the elite having disdain for the public. Yet the powers that be seem almost insulted by the growing level of discontent their corruption has engendered.

The total disregard for the law, and even common decency, at the highest levels of government, has infected people on the levels of the pyramid far below. Commonly they feel that if those who are ruling over them do not obey the law or even act with common decency, then why should they? Consequently, society becomes more and more crude and rude, and sometimes even barbaric. I have been noticing it in something as innocuous as the behavior of people in traffic. It is not uncommon at all for drivers to ignore traffic signs, lights, and to bully their way ahead of others. Manners and language are getting ever more crude, all this fueled by a growing sense of discontent.

To be discontented is to be unhappy. When you have such discontent all around you, which is being fueled by the lawless deeds of those above us all, what hope is there of things getting better? So discontent can give way to hopelessness, and hopelessness can give way to violence and every vile thing. Truly these are the last days.

Believers have hope. Our happiness does not depend on this world doing the right thing. Surely if it did, we could never be happy. Our happiness comes to us from our sense of fulfillment in serving the One who is always righteous, always true, always faithful, who is our Lord. We can lift our heads up and be happy, because we know He loves us and that He sees our pain exiled in the midst of the pagan nations. It is His intention to make a place of safety for us and to bring us home. Friends, do not be discontented because of the evils of this world and the corruptions of the leaders. Be uplifted and encouraged because your name is written in heaven and eternity is a very long time.

Shalom, Eliyahu
