From Elijahu

"All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players.."

So goes the famous phrase of a Shakespeare monologue from the comedy, "As You Like It." While the observation of the world being a stage is profound, we cannot give Shakespeare the credit. We can find this idea popping up throughout much of history before Shakespeare, being observed at least as far back as the Greek philosopher and mathematician, Pythagoras, some 500 years before Messiah was born.

Of course, back then the meaning of the phrase was centered on the changes in the lives of individuals, rather than on global events. For example, in the same Shakespeare monologue quoted above the speaker goes on to explain "one man in his time plays many parts, his acts being seven ages." That is clearly focused on the life of each person going through stages of life.

Now, in the modern era, "all the world is a stage" in a new and different way. It is a stage that we literally view on our television and computer screens. Through this means we all have some sense of what is going on, literally, in "all the world" as we watch events from the other side of the world pass before our eyes, often in real time. These events are stitched together in our minds in a global consciousness of the world we all share - like an audience watching a play - even if we don't all agree on what it all means.

In the 21st century the unfolding world play has gotten quite intense. We have all seen a parade of shocking spectacles unfolding before our eyes, each of which has changed the world. Let's look at a few big examples.

Perhaps the first stunning wake-up call of the 21st century was the September 11 attacks of 2001, at the World Trade Center in NYC. This was, without a doubt, the most shocking event viewers had ever seen live on TV. That was definitely true for me, and for everyone I knew at the time. It was as if some apocalyptic scene from the book of Revelation had jumped off the page and into the real world! No one could stop talking about it.

The aftermath of 9/11 gave us the War on Terror, and with that a steady stream of horror on the world stage. According to a report by Newsweek the War on Terror cost the U.S. $21 Trillion. Just imagine how much positive good that much money could have been used for if it could have been put to more productive uses. That's not the worst of it though. Consider the loss of human life. The 'War on Terror' has killed nearly a million known casualties, and only God knows how many deaths are unaccounted for beyond that.

9/11 also altered life in America for every citizen. The USA PATRIOT Act, enacted in October 2001 in the wake of the September 11 attacks, claimed to enhance national security and deter terrorism by broadening the government's surveillance and investigative powers to levels never before seen. 9/11, at the time, created a national sentiment of vulnerability and urgency to prevent further attacks, allowing a rapid legislative process that pushed through the Act while the population was suffering national trauma. It seemed strange to thinking people that a new law of so great and sweeping a scope, with so many controversial innovations written into the law, could be prepared and passed in only 1 month! It was as if the writers of the 'play' knew the 'plot', so had the PATRIOT Act already written and ready for the triggering events to occur.

The Act significantly impacted banking and business and through that, the activities of ordinary Americans, by introducing measures like increased scrutiny of them and their financial transactions. This was said to combat money laundering and terrorism financing, requiring banks to maintain extensive records gathering and reporting of banking activities, and facilitating greater information sharing with and among government agencies, and similar measures. All this without a warrant or even evidence of any criminal activity on the part of the masses being surveilled.

While some provisions of the USA PATRIOT Act have been modified or allowed to expire, many changes have remained in place or been reinforced through subsequent legislation. Key surveillance powers have been extended or renewed multiple times, and new measures have been introduced in the context of national security. Thus, law-abiding Americans are burdened under scrutiny of the government and proxies, such as banks, while illegal aliens have streamed into America by the millions, with little or no concern by the government [until recently] about national security or terrorism from the millions of illegal immigrants.

At this point the overreaching measures brought into America via the PATRIOT Act have pretty much been woven into the national psyche of the general public. Nevertheless, privacy rights and civil liberties protections in America have suffered a great loss and will probably never be fully restored.

All the world is a stage

Fall of 2008 gave us another major spectacle for our TVs and computer screens, the effects of which have stayed with the world for years. I'm talking about the Global Economic Crisis, which crashed the world into recession and reshaped the global economy ever since. Here was the beginning of the national homelessness crisis in America, and probably a lot of other places, with homeless people living under every bridge and highway, and lining the streets of many major cities. In some countries it was far worse, with people eating dirt to deal with the hunger, with thousands of the poorest people in the forgotten corners of the world starving to death on a daily basis. Meanwhile, taxpayers were bailing out the wealthy bankers who brought on all that pain, allowing them to take millions in bonuses and golden parachutes.

The Arab Spring of 2010-2011 added to the global drama before us, reshaping the Middle East as regimes rose and fell, bringing on major unrest with new terror groups such as ISIS finding massive followings, and civil wars, such as the one in Syria, murdering and driving the people out. Refugees migrated from the middle east into Europe and other countries by the millions, bringing all the problems of the Muslim world, and the Jihad, with them. This forever changed and weakened the national character and culture of many nations that allowed themselves to be overrun.

2015 was a very significant year on the world stage. That year gave us something never before seen in 6,000 years of world history. That is, same sex 'marriage'. This was deemed to be "Constitutional" by the US Supreme Court, even though the very idea was never thought about or discussed by the founders of America, so is certainly not to be found anywhere in the Constitution. Further, the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution. says; "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

In other words, the US Supreme Court has no power over the institution of marriage delegated to it in the Constitution, so does not have the authority to order a completely unique and previously unknown interpretation of marriage for every state in the Union. And yet it did. This presumptuous ruling offends the Creator of Marriage, insuring a Divine response.

Apparently 2015 was a year of global rebellion against God. I say that because the world entered into a conspiracy against the Creator of the world in that year, even worse than the same sex marriage ruling. The 193-Member United Nations General Assembly met at the United Nations Headquarters in New York

September 25-27, 2015 and formally adopted the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, which Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon hailed as a universal vision for the world.

The 2030 Agenda essentially claims possession and control of the world and everything and everyone in it. It is a global power grab by the world's elite, and the world has been rocking from the unrelenting changes this has brought upon us ever since. This new global government is to go into full effect controlling the world by 2030, in a direct challenge of the rulership of the world by the world's Creator and Owner, YHWH. If you know Scripture you know this is the issue that will be settled on That Day - The Great Day of God the Almighty.

Of course, the world spectacle has continued on since 2015, as we move ever closer to 2030. All I have to say is "Covid" and you already know that story. "Woke" - you know that story too. "Technology" - so much change at lightning speed. Can you say "AI" anyone? How about "Donald Trump." And you know I could go on.

My point is, we are all watching the amazing spectacle unfolding on the world stage and it looks just like the prophetic picture of the End of the World in the Bible. Events are heading towards a predicted climax, ticking off one foretold event after another. Many of the prophecies even seem to be written for an audience of people who are all watching the world at the same time. That wasn't possible in Bible times, but as I've laid out above, technology has made it possible for our day. "That Day" - "The Great Day" - it is coming quickly. Soon you will see it. More than that, you will be among the players on the stage. You will make choices and you will live or die because of them. Don't wait until then. Make the right choices now to position yourself to be ready for "That Day."

Join me tonight for my live stream presentation: On That Day - Joel 2. The place will be Tsiyon.Net or one of our other streaming platforms. The time will be 8 PM Central. Be ready, right on time.
